FBI FOIPA Addendum

As referenced in our letter responding to your Freedom of Information/Privacy Acts (FOIPA) request, the FBI FOIPA Addendum provides information applicable to your request. Part 1 of the Addendum includes standard responses that apply to all requests. Part 2 includes standard responses that apply to requests for records about individuals to the extent your request seeks the listed information. Part 3 includes general information about FBI records, searches, and programs.

Part 1: The standard responses below apply to all requests:

- (i) 5 U.S.C. § 552(c). Congress excluded three categories of law enforcement and national security records from the requirements of the FOIPA [5 U.S.C. § 552(c)]. FBI responses are limited to those records subject to the requirements of the FOIPA. Additional information about the FBI and the FOIPA can be found on the www.fbi.gov/foia website.
- (ii) Intelligence Records. To the extent your request seeks records of intelligence sources, methods, or activities, the FBI can neither confirm nor deny the existence of records pursuant to FOIA exemptions (b)(1), (b)(3), and as applicable to requests for records about individuals, PA exemption (j)(2) [5 U.S.C. §§ 552/552a (b)(1), (b)(3), and (j)(2)]. The mere acknowledgment of the existence or nonexistence of such records is itself a classified fact protected by FOIA exemption (b)(1) and/or would reveal intelligence sources, methods, or activities protected by exemption (b)(3) [50 USC § 3024(i)(1)]. This is a standard response and should not be read to indicate that any such records do or do not exist.

Part 2: The standard responses below apply to all requests for records on individuals:

- (i) Requests for Records about any Individual—Watch Lists. The FBI can neither confirm nor deny the existence of any individual's name on a watch list pursuant to FOIA exemption (b)(7)(E) and PA exemption (j)(2) [5 U.S.C. §§ 552/552a (b)(7)(E), (j)(2)]. This is a standard response and should not be read to indicate that watch list records do or do not exist.
- (ii) Requests for Records about any Individual—Witness Security Program Records. The FBI can neither confirm nor deny the existence of records which could identify any participant in the Witness Security Program pursuant to FOIA exemption (b)(3) and PA exemption (j)(2) [5 U.S.C. §§ 552/552a (b)(3), 18 U.S.C. 3521, and (j)(2)]. This is a standard response and should not be read to indicate that such records do or do not exist.
- (iii) Requests for Confidential Informant Records. The FBI can neither confirm nor deny the existence of confidential informant records pursuant to FOIA exemptions (b)(7)(D), (b)(7)(E), and (b)(7)(F) [5 U.S.C. § 552 (b)(7)(D), (b)(7)(E), and (b)(7)(F)] and Privacy Act exemption (j)(2) [5 U.S.C. § 552a (j)(2)]. The mere acknowledgment of the existence or nonexistence of such records would reveal confidential informant identities and information, expose law enforcement techniques, and endanger the life or physical safety of individuals. This is a standard response and should not be read to indicate that such records do or do not exist.

Part 3: General Information:

- (i) Record Searches and Standard Search Policy. The Record/Information Dissemination Section (RIDS) searches for reasonably described records by searching systems, such as the Central Records System (CRS), or locations where responsive records would reasonably be found. The CRS is an extensive system of records consisting of applicant, investigative, intelligence, personnel, administrative, and general files compiled by the FBI per its law enforcement, intelligence, and administrative functions. The CRS spans the entire FBI organization, comprising records of FBI Headquarters, FBI Field Offices, and FBI Legal Attaché Offices (Legats) worldwide; Electronic Surveillance (ELSUR) records are included in the CRS. The standard search policy is a search for main entity records in the CRS. Unless specifically requested, a standard search does not include a search for reference entity records, administrative records of previous FOIPA requests, or civil litigation files.
 - a. Main Entity Records – created for individuals or non-individuals who are the subjects or the focus of an investigation
 - b. Reference Entity Records- created for individuals or non-individuals who are associated with a case but are not known subjects or the focus of an investigation
- (ii) FBI Records. Founded in 1908, the FBI carries out a dual law enforcement and national security mission. As part of this dual mission, the FBI creates and maintains records on various subjects; however, the FBI does not maintain records on every person, subject, or entity.
- (iii) Foreseeable Harm Standard. As amended in 2016, the Freedom of Information Act provides that a federal agency may withhold responsive records only if: (1) the agency reasonably foresees that disclosure would harm an interest protected by one of the nine exemptions that FOIA enumerates, or (2) disclosure is prohibited by law (5 United States Code, Section 552(a)(8)(A)(i)). The FBI considers this foreseeable harm standard in the processing of its requests.
- (iv) Requests for Criminal History Records or Rap Sheets. The Criminal Justice Information Services (CJIS) Division provides Identity History Summary Checks – often referred to as a criminal history record or rap sheet. These criminal history records are not the same as material in an investigative “FBI file.” An Identity History Summary Check is a listing of information taken from fingerprint cards and documents submitted to the FBI in connection with arrests, federal employment, naturalization, or military service. For a fee, individuals can request a copy of their Identity History Summary Check. Forms and directions can be accessed at www.fbi.gov/about-us/cjis/identity-history-summary-checks. Additionally, requests can be submitted electronically at www.edo.cjis.gov. For additional information, please contact CJIS directly at (304) 625-5590.

Stefan Heym was born on April 10, 1913 at Chemnitz, Germany. He graduated from the University of Berlin and resided in Germany until 1933 when, because of his writings, he became a political refugee. Heym lived in Czechoslovakia from 1933 to 1935; entered the United States in 1935, residing in Chicago, Illinois from 1935 to 1937, resided in New York City from 1937 to 1942 and resided in Missouri and Maryland in 1943 and part of 1944. He served with the United States Army from March, 1943 to the middle of 1946 in England, France, Luxembourg and Holland as well as Belgium and Germany. He resided in Mexico in 1946 and became a naturalized citizen of the United States on May 26, 1943 in the Circuit Court at Neosho, Missouri.

Heym was alleged by informants to have been a Comintern agent. In August, 1948 Heym advised of his intention of spending his immediate future in Czechoslovakia doing research work, with the cooperation of the Czechoslovakian Government, as an author. He resided at 132 East 16th Street, New York City. After his trip to Czechoslovakia, he re-entered the United States on April 20, 1949 at New York City and resumed his residence at apartment 5 E 441 East 20th Street, New York City.

Heym was listed as a sponsor of the Cultural and Scientific Conference for Peace held on March 25-27, 1949. He was the editor of a German language newspaper published by the Volks Echo Publishing Company of New York City from 1937 to 1939.

Heym was the author of the novel, "Hostages", in 1942 and after his discharge from the Army he published a novel called, "Of Smiling Peace". He was also the author of a pamphlet, "Nazis in the USA", which was described as being an expose of Hitler's aims and agents in the U.S.A.

On April 30, 1943 he had his name changed from Helmut Flieg to Stefan Heym by the Supreme Court of New York. His mother, Elsie Krimol Flieg, remarried after her first husband, Daniel Flieg, committed suicide in 1935. She married one Hugo Fuchs, a Rabbi by profession, in Germany who fled to Argentina, and subsequently to the United States and resided at 870 Riverside Drive, New York City.

Heym had been investigated by the Bureau under a Security Matter - C classification in 1948.

"There are definite facts which I want to report to you which will prove to you that the majority of the German - Americans are against Fascism. That great national organization, the Turner Bund, renamed itself the American Turners in order not to be confused with the Nazi Bund. People with whom we have no connection down on the Texas farms held a great mass meeting and tore down the swastika flag because they said 'We are Americans.' The German - American League for culture recently held a German Day meeting in New York, which was attended by six thousand people. The German-American societies of New York to which the Nazis were affiliated, kicked out the Nazi Bund and held a German Day meeting without and against the Nazis. In the mid-West, in Milwaukee, where the largest percentage of German - Americans is located, the Nazi Bund is an outcast.

"Don't boycott the German - American people, just the Nazis."

The "Journal American" of October 22, 1946, contained an article by Howard Rushmore charging that the American Authors Authority and Author's League of America was a Communist effort to control literature. Rushmore pointed out the support given the AAA by Stefan Heym, Vice-Chairman of the Action Committee of the Author's Guild. Rushmore said that Heym came to the United States from Germany and thereafter worked closely with Communist Party headquarters in New York City. He added that he was a liaison man to the German-Red literary movement under appointment by the Communist Party National Committee, his function being to meet incoming German Communists connected with the literary field and instruct them in the Party line they were to pursue.

On February 13, 1950, the Arts, Sciences and Professions sponsored a "Rally Against the H-Bomb" at Carnegie Hall, 7th Avenue and 57th Street, New York City. One of the speakers was Stefan Heym. Heym greeted the audience as "Fellow comrades of the atomic era". He said that the question was whether we should follow a "bomb policy" or a "peace policy". He said that the government, ordering the use of the bomb, would be signing a warrant for its own destruction. He claimed that Japan was defeated before the first atomic bomb ever dropped on Hiroshima, and that the dropping of the bomb merely gave Japan an opportunity to surrender and still save face. He mentioned the tremendous destruction which took place in Germany, and said that in spite of the destruction brought by bombs, Germany was not defeated until her Army in the field was defeated. He said that the same would apply in any future war, and that in his opinion the bomb could never decide the war. He said that for this reason the hydrogen bomb should never be made by the United States.

Re Bonnlet January 6, 1965. u

We have noted press accounts, particularly an article in the West German weekly news magazine "Der Spiegel" of February 3, 1965, and an article in the Hamburg, West German, newspaper "Die Welt," which have referred to the fact that the subject has recently come under strong criticism by East German governmental agencies for some of his writings. Among them is the book "Der Tag X" which dealt with the June 17, 1958, uprising in East Germany. Reportedly the subject's detailed account of the happenings of that day were not in line with the official East German position as to the causes of that uprising. u

The "Die Welt" issue of March 17, 1965, also carried an article datelined Munich, West Germany, which stated that East German authorities have refused the subject an exit permit to enter West Germany where he had planned to attend and address a meeting of the literary group known as "Tukankreis" on the subject of his writings and particularly on his novel "Lenz Oder Die Freiheit," which was said to have been circulated in West Germany. u

(COMMUNISTS)

BERLIN--THE EAST GERMAN COMMUNIST GOVERNMENT ANNOUNCED TODAY IT HAD FIRED MINISTER OF CULTURE HANS BENTZIEN FOR "ALLOWING GRAVE MISTAKES."

THE GOVERNMENT ANNOUNCEMENT DID NOT EXPLAIN WHAT MISTAKES THE 39-YEAR-OLD ENTZIEN HAD MADE OR HOW HE HAD FAILED IN HIS DUTIES.

IT SAID HE HAD BEEN REPLACED BY KLAUS GYSI, 53, WHO HAS HEADED AN EAST GERMAN PUBLISHING HOUSE FOR THE PAST NINE YEARS.

MEANWHILE, AUTHOR STEFAN HEYM DISCLOSED TODAY THAT COMMUNIST AUTHORITIES HAD BARRED HIM FROM CROSSING THROUGH THE WALL TO KEEP A SPEAKING ENGAGEMENT IN WEST BERLIN.

HEYM HAS BEEN UNDER FIRE BY EAST GERMAN COMMUNIST AUTHORITIES WHO HAVE ACCUSED HIM OF NON-CONFORMISM AND OF "BELONGING TO THOSE PERMANENT NEGATIVE CRITICS OF CONDITIONS IN THE GERMAN DEMOCRATIC REPUBLIC."

The LHM is classified "~~Secret~~" because the information concerning STEFAN HEYM applying for a visa to enter the U.S. was set forth in a memo dated 3/11/66, indicating information was received from [REDACTED] USD [REDACTED] which was classified "~~Secret~~." [REDACTED] was of the opinion that subject believes he is no longer a citizen of the U.S. (X) u

A communication dated 10/21/55, was sent to "All Diplomatic and Consular Posts and the Governor of Hawaii, Puerto Rico, The Virgin Islands, Guam, and American Samoa," advising in effect, that if subject makes application for further passport facilities or for registration as an American citizen, such application should be referred to the Department for consideration and subject should be requested to furnish an affidavit of the nature outlined in Section 51.142 of the Passport Regulations. U

On 3/15/66, the U.S. Mission, Berlin, was advised by the State Department that if subject applies at their office, they should endeavor to resolve citizenship status on expedited basis. His sworn statement as to the fact and details of his naturalization as an East German citizen may be accepted, if no advanced reason is known, as sufficient evidence of the expatriating act and be submitted in support of certificate of loss of naturalization under Section 349 (a)(1) of the Immigration and Naturalization Act. In this event consideration of his visa application need not be delayed awaiting approval of certificate of loss. U

"If there is insufficient evidence of expatriating action by Mr. HEYM and if he should desire to renounce his claim to U.S. citizenship, you should accept his oath of renunciation, prepare a certificate of loss of nationality and proceed with consideration of his visa application." U

The following references in the file captioned "Author of Letter to Walter Winchell, May, 1958" set out information regarding a letter* Walter Winchell received and furnished to the Bureau. It was indicated that no identification was made of the author of instant letter or some of the individuals referred to in the letter. One possibility was suggested that Stefan Heym aka Helmut Flieg, a film writer in the 1940's who was born in Germany, was identical with Karl Hamin referred to by the writer of the letter as a top communist. A review of available information concerning Heym indicated he never spent any appreciable amount of time on the West Coast, and his whereabouts during the period referred to in the letter was either New York, Missouri or Maryland. Heym was granted political asylum and citizenship in East Germany by the Communist regime in 1953. U

The following references in the file captioned "American Business Consultants, Incorporated, aka Counterattack" contain information regarding Stefan Heym's activities in the US and Berlin, Germany from 1935 to June, 1953. Information appeared in various issues of "Counterattack" from 5/5/50 through 10/3/58. Heym, born in Germany emigrated to the US from Czechoslovakia, graduated from the University of Chicago and served in the US Army during World War II. Heym supported CP fronts since the late thirties, and signed a brief on behalf of communist writers that appeared before a Senate Committee. Heym was identified as a well known German Communist during Senate Hearings in May, 1953. He was a writer for "Neve Zeitung", a US Information Service newspaper in Berlin. He wrote several books that were removed from US libraries abroad by the US State Department. Heym gave up his US citizenship and returned to East Germany. He also sent to President Eisenhower, the Bronze Star he allegedly won at the Battle of the Bulge.

(C)

Heym was the subject of a security investigation instituted by the FBI in the early 1940's. Investigation disclosed that he was born April 10, 1913, at Chemnitz, Germany, under the name Helmut Fliog, which he subsequently changed to his present name after taking up residence in the United States. Heym reportedly came to the United States as a refugee from Czechoslovakia in 1935. He subsequently resided in Chicago, Illinois, and New York City. He served with the United States Army in Europe during World War II and became a naturalized citizen of the United States on May 26, 1943. U

Heym was widely known in this country as a pro-communist writer and both he and his wife, Gertrude, were described as "Marxist intellectuals." Heym reportedly left this country in approximately 1950 and traveled to Europe. In 1953, it was reported that he had renounced his United States citizenship and had been granted not only political asylum but citizenship by the Government of Communist East Germany. In the course of our investigation, allegations were received to the effect that Heym had worked with a known Comintern agent in the late 1930's. U

At that time Mildred Harnack was attached to the Faculty of Foreign Studies; the faculty was headed by Professor Franz Six, SS Colonel. (SS Colonel Six was sentenced to 20 years imprisonment for mass murder by a US military court soon after the war; he was released in 1952). Despite the difficulty, Mildred Harnack managed to set up an anti-Nazi resistance group in the faculty, right under the nose of the SS colonel.

But all the time the Gestapo had been getting closer. On September 7th 1942, Mildred and Arvid Harnack were arrested and charged with high treason.

On December 19th 1942, Arvid Harnack and a number of his closest collaborators were sentenced to death by the Reich Military Court; Arvid Harnack was beheaded on December 22nd.

In the same trial, Mildred Harnack was sentenced to six years imprisonment. Hitler personally intervened, and insisted on a death sentence. The court was resummoned on January 13th 1943 and Mildred Harnack was sentenced to death; she was executed by the axe in Plötzensee Prison, Berlin, on February 16th 1943.

While she was awaiting execution she translated into English one of the most famous poems by Goethe, which starts with the lines "Edel sei der Mensch, hülfreich und gut!"

Here is Mildred Harnack's translation of the last verse of the poem, a translation made in the death cell:

Man alone
Can do the impossible,
He can distinguish,
Choose and judge;
He can make permanent
The fleeting moment.

In 1969 the Soviet Government awarded decorations, most of them posthumous, to members of the Schulze-Boysen-Harnack organisation, generally known by the nickname "Red Orchestra". Mildred Harnack was awarded the "Order of the Patriotic War, First Class", and her husband the "Order of the Red Banner".

(This article is based upon material provided by GDR writer Julius Mader, who specialises in research into the Nazi period; he hopes, possibly with the assistance of an American co-author, to publish a full-length study of this contemporary American heroine.)

GDR WRITER EXPLAINS THINGS FOR AMERICANS — Stefan Heym's Personal Look (I)

Below we reproduce a major part of a long article on the GDR published by the "New York Times" on March 23rd. The article is by Stefan Heym, German-born writer who fought as a lieutenant in the US army in World War II, renounced his American citizenship in 1953, and has since lived in the GDR. Many of Heym's novels have been published in Britain and the US, from "The Crusaders" (1948) to his recent success "The King David Report" (1973). Stefan Heym is sometimes described in the western press as a "leading GDR dissident", but he himself disagrees, describing himself as a supporter of the GDR, warts and all. Several of his books have appeared only in western countries, having been rejected by GDR publishers.

For reasons of space, Stefan Heym's article had to be shortened here, and published in two installments; the next installment follows in the next issue. All cuts have been marked, and a summary given of what has been cut.

EAST BERLIN. A letter from the editor: "Would you be interested in writing 3,500 words for our Magazine on life in East Germany today?"

I'll have to think about that.

When you live in a country you don't do much reflecting about life there — you simply live it. You are part of the social web; you are involved in life's conflicts, its contradictions; you are influenced by people and, in turn, influence them; you argue or you shut up; frequently you are annoyed, sometimes you laugh; and, above all, you work, creatively if you can, and treadmill if you must.

So why the interest in life here? Is it that East Germany, the German Democratic Republic, is considered a special country, outlandish, just recently discovered, and now people want to know about the customs of the natives and what bargains to look for in the bazaars?

There might be something in that. The place is being discovered, to judge by the sudden influx of journalists, traders, embassy wives and visiting firemen; the latest anniversary, its 25th, was duly noted and commented on, and all sorts of sage counsel on how to treat the population and how to deal with its chieftains was spread abroad. An aura of respectability has been given it — and even some kind things are being said about it, despite the continued presence of Watchtowers and Wall.

Well, then: How is life here?

At moments, I feel that there is something surrealistic about it. Younger men, born in the country, after it took shape and acquired its initials, GDR, may not share this feeling; but I sometimes can't help thinking back to the days in exile when we sat around a smudged table in a Prague coffeehouse, discussing the Germany that was to come once Hitler was vanquished. No one at that table would have dreamed of predicting a state of affairs in which Communists exercised power in one-third of Germany and a third of Berlin to boot, without the other two-thirds of the Reich and its capital turning socialist inside six months, at the latest. A revolution unable to cross from one side of the Berlin street to the other — grotesque! Yet that status, a Germany part capitalist and part socialist, has lasted for more than a quarter of a century. It is as though history were frozen, with the Berlin Wall and the denuded strips of land along the Republic's western frontier merely a tangible expression of that freeze, which will probably last as long as a worldwide balance of power exists between the two big blocs.

In time, you learn to live with it. The drive from my home in the suburbs to the center of Berlin leads me along the approaches to the Wall. Occasionally, I take notice of the border, signposted by new, and the wife, and I don't give them a second thought. I am sure, do the drivers ahead of me — and behind. That, too, is part of the surrealistic picture.

The division of Germany and of Berlin, has its advantages only for those who shudder at the thought of a united Germany in world sports, world economy and world politics, but for the Germans as well. The citizens of the German Democratic Republic enjoy the highest living standard within the socialist orbit, and the West Germans, I understand, do pretty well over there in capitalism. I doubt that this is the result exclusively of the able hands of the German workmen and of German managerial talent; I would say that on either side of the fence the existence of another Germany, of a social alternative, causes a proportionately larger share of the cake to be handed to the greedy masses. A competition is taking place; its prize: the German soul.

In this competition, the German Democratic Republic has been coming off second-best — up to now. It started with many handicaps: lack of raw materials, hardly any heavy industry, no Marshall Plan money, a population indoctrinated by Dr. Goebbels against anything Communist or Soviet and, on top of all that, some bad errors of policy stemming from Stalinist patterns of thought.

To an extent, it is catching up — strangely enough, with the aid of the Wall, which was both an act of desperation and a new beginning. The Wall set an end to the westward stampede of people. Ugly though it was (and is), it gave visible evidence of the decision that the experiment called socialism would not be given up in that one-third of Germany called the German Democratic Republic. It was the first step on the path that led to the establishment of a United States Embassy in East Berlin.

The competition goes on. I don't see it merely as a contest to be decided by the greater variety of consumer goods available at lesser cost; for a man's mind may also be influenced by the scope of vision to which you open his eyes, by the sense of pride and belonging you instill in him. Not that I underestimate the economic element: The oil sheiks of Araby, feudal lords par excellence, might yet prove to be a revolutionary potential. In all innocence, the sheiks could turn the incipient crisis which has gripped West Germany, along with other Western countries, into a bust of such proportions that the GDR's lumbering economy would appear, by comparison, as a shining example of financial solidity and good business practice. Let there be two or three million unemployed in the capitalist part of Germany, and Erich Honecker, first secretary of the Socialist Unity (Communist) party, can safely lease the Wall to the Government in Bonn.

But meanwhile? You may not be conscious of being confined while you drive alongside the Wall but it's an irritant, nevertheless.

(S. H. here tells the story of two GDR boys, who repeatedly crossed illegally to West Berlin but always returned. They were punished; S. H. suggests they should have been rewarded for loyalty.)

How many people actually suffer by a sense of being hemmed in is hard to say. The GDR is a small place; you drive from one end to the other in a few hours; and though it is a beautiful country and not as spoiled as most of the industrialized West by the uncontrolled mushrooming of cities and by pollution, it offers little of the Aroma of the Wide World that is being advertised on Western television to sell a certain brand of cigarettes.

Since the best-guarded Wall is not an obstacle to the electron, and since most of the GDR is easily covered by West German and West Berlin television stations, its citizens get glimpses of the attractions of that Wide World without being able to enter it and catch a whiff of its real odors. That makes for a certain frustration — and for illusions. The authorities have given up their efforts to dissuade the population from looking on Western television; the obvious countermeasure, an improvement of the GDR television programs, has been impeded by frightened officials who prefer to cling to well-worn formulas and who manage to have their newscasts and commentaries sound like court ceremonial.

The Government's figures on the number of television viewers are kept a deep secret. I can only report my experience: Whenever I was on West German television, a variety of GDR people, from border guards to streetcar conductors to barbers and store clerks, have told me they saw and heard me; when I appeared on GDR television with a statement on Vietnam, one person, an old party comrade, called up to say how happy she was that finally I had graduated to a spot before our own cameras.

The influence of Western television and radio on the minds of people here is considerable: It shapes their tastes in fashions, music and film; it creates consumer demands that GDR industry and trade make belated efforts to fill.

People have money. Though wages and salaries are about 60 per cent of what they are in the West, and incomes of over 2,000 marks ($870) a month are rare. In many cases, both husband and wife are working and there is always the Saturday and Sunday Schwarzarbeit (illegal work), where the skills of a man are applied privately to augment his income or to build the new dachas that dot the countryside.

Rents are low. For my two-story, five-room house in a Berlin suburb, with kitchen, bathroom and a small garden, I've been paying, since 1952, 150 marks a month, the equivalent, at the official rate of exchange, of about $65.

Nor is there, at least until now, any inflation biting into the citizens' earnings. The other day at my butcher's, I happened to look at the price list on the wall, and I was struck by the fly specks on it. The list, including its prices, had not been changed in 15 years, but the supply of meats and of the beloved German Wursts had greatly increased both in quantity and variety. Shoes, which previously were purchased in the West by well-meaning relatives and mailed into the GDR, you can now buy at lesser cost here, and if you figure in the still existing black-market exchange rate between West and East marks at approximately 1 to 4, their price is ridiculous.

So, as not to appear too lyrical, let me add that you still have trouble getting items that are matter-of-course in the West. (S. H. mentions petty frustrations, e. g. non-availability of bathroom tiles.)

Along with Western television and Western radio broadcasts, it is things like that which tend constantly to put in question the tenets being preached by the GDR authorities to their people.

More Sugar Beet

Sugar beet production will be considerably intensified this year in the GDR to reduce sugar imports, it has just been announced. The area under cultivation will increase by 75,000 acres this year. The total area under sugar beet rose from 475,000 acres in 1970 to 590,000 acres in 1974.

The introduction of monocarpal seed stock, new drilling machinery and insecticides have halved the manual labour involved in sugar beet cultivation.

GDR WRITER EXPLAINS THINGS FOR AMERICANS — Stefan Heym's Personal Look (II)

Below we reproduce the second part of a long article on the GDR originally published by the "New York Times" on March 23rd. The article is by Stefan Heym, German-born writer who fought as a lieutenant in the US Army in World War II, and settled in the GDR in 1953. For reasons of space, the original article has been shortened; all cuts are indicated. The first installment of the article was reproduced in GERMAN REPORT dated April 23rd.

Marx once said that das Sein bestimmt das Bewusstsein, which means, roughly translated, that your situation in life determines your thinking.

Eight hours a day, the GDR citizen takes part in socialist production such as it is and speaks in socialist terms such as they are taught him. But the rest of the time, he is largely on his own, and much of his entertainment and news come from the other side. Thus, while the ideological fare supplied him by his party and trade union seems ponderous and often hard to swallow, he tends to develop a two-level consciousness, thinking and saying one thing at one time and its opposite at another. This is not hypocrisy; he actually believes in what he says when he says it. (S. H. tells the story of a "positive worker" named Kalle who nevertheless says "Hell, no", when asked if he is a member of the Socialist Unity Party.)

Ideally, the party is a devoted, self-sacrificing group of revolutionaries who, equipped with the teachings of Marx and Lenin, are pledged to change this earth into a better place. The GDR, starting out as a fraction of a war-ravaged country, today is one of the world's 10 biggest industrial producers. Some Western voices claim that this was done despite the party, merely by German Tüchtigkeit (proficiency), as in West Germany. But this view omits the fact that in East Germany a twofold job was performed: Along with economic reconstruction, a revolution of the social structure had to be brought about — and was brought about by the party.

I have known some of the men who helped to do it, men of integrity and devotion whose names may mean little to Western readers but who have left deeper traces in history than some whose names are the household words of today. There was Erich Wendt, printer, graduate of Gulag, later one of the GDR's leading publishers and state secretary in the Ministry of Culture; Fritz Grosse, textile worker, survivor of the Nazis' Mauthausen concentration camp, who rebuilt government in Saxony and became one of the architects of the GDR's foreign policy; Richard Stahlmann, farm worker, who led the guerilla troops behind the Franco lines that Hemingway described in "For Whom the Bell Tolls" — they recently buried him in the uniform of a colonel of the Berlin guard regiment of the People's Army.

(S. H. relates an anecdote about Walter Ulbricht.)

The party is also an institution which has held power in this part of Germany for close to 30 years, and not even Ulbricht could say exactly how many of its nearly two million members were devoted, self-sacrificing revolutionaries. I have known people wearing the party button who were paper pushers and poltroons, autocrats and careerists; and I fear the worker Kalle has encountered them, too. Mediocre of mind and petty of character, they talk Marxism-Leninism by rote and they excel in always loudly proclaiming their fidelity to the current line and leadership. United in the conviction that the revolution achieved its noblest goal when it deposited their behinds in comfortable seats, they of course are opposed to any further changes.

They are being fought. Any politically sensitive, informed person can feel that underneath the calm surface of life in the GDR a struggle is being waged over the direction in which the Republic is to develop: Is socialism here to be a bureaucratic homunculus, estranged from the people, or a living movement vibrant with ideas that men everywhere will want to make their own?

I had no notion that such conflicts exist when, in the early fifties, I came to settle in the German Democratic Republic. In socialism, so I thought, life would be basically harmonious; the capitalists having been eliminated, everybody would be pulling one way, and the difficulties which struck your eye I analyzed as being endemic to postwar reconstruction: Socialism, good old sensible socialism, would solve them pronto.

In June, 1953, workers here struck against the workers' state and marched through the streets of Berlin, demonstrating against the workers' government and — incidentally — shattering my illusions. I began to understand that there were new conflicts, indigenous to socialism, new contradictions that differed fundamentally from those in the capitalist world. Much of what I have written since touches in one way or another on this problem.

I doubt that I would have stumbled on this largely virgin field had I not come to live in the GDR. Life here has its rewards for the writer, even though he might get into occasional tiffs with the powers that be.

On the whole, the word of the writer in socialist countries counts for more than that of his colleague in the West. If the writer is a good boy, if he toes the line or at least avoids conflicting with it, he will be honored and even pampered; violation of the unwritten rules of conduct, however, may be punished by ostracism.

The position of the writer as a VIP can be traced back to the early working-class movement whose generally inarticulate members needed spokesmen to express their desires, theoreticians to legitimize their political claims. Spokesmen and theoreticians could only come from the rebellious intelligentsia: therefore the preponderance of writers in the top ranks of the workers' leagues and revolutionary associations of 19th-century Germany, France, England and Russia. 100-142236-

In today's socialist countries, the leadership of the workers' parties has long since passed from the visionaries into the hands of hard-nosed practical politicians, but even they still have that belief in the magic of the right words, and they are deeply disappointed if it isn't forthcoming from the writer. They become hurt and angry if the writer goes so far as to contrast reality to what they would like to see depicted.

I don't know any author in the GDR who wouldn't side with socialism, and I know quite a few of them through long friendship and also because I recently compiled an anthology of GDR prose for a West German publisher. In putting the 35 stories together, I was struck by the fact that hardly any of them were defensive about socialism; they simply took it for granted and dealt in a most thoughtful manner with its daily aspects and conflicts. Motion pictures like "Die Legende von Paul und Paula" or plays like "Die neuen Leiden des jungen W.", both hits in East and West Germany, are along these lines.

But what if the tactical needs of the day's politics and the demands of a man's art refuse to match, as has happened not just to me but to a number of my fellow authors? To which is the writer to give preference? I have had a younger colleague weep on my shoulder over a new novel he had tailored specifically to some high-level requirements. A change took place on that level; the requirements were dropped, and the book, though not published, was already an anachronism.

Tactical considerations are one thing; art, if it is to be effective, quite another. Of course, writers have always and in any kind of society made compromises. But there is one point on which the writer in socialism cannot afford to compromise if he wants his work to last beyond the day: the truth.

AN OPEN LETTER TO STEFAN HEYM

by Elaine Mann and Howard Mann (in "Daily World", New York)

(In March this year the "New York Times Magazine" published a long article by GDR writer Stefan Heym. GERMAN REPORT republished major portions of the article on April 23rd and May 7th.

On April 8th and April 10th the New York "Daily World" published a two-part reply to Stefan Heym, written by Elaine and Howard Mann, who had just returned from a visit to the GDR. Their "Open Letter" is reprinted below.)

Despite the ominous "cold war" style montage on the opening page — your face, stern, tightlipped, peering over a forbidding shot of "the Wall" — we turned to your "Letter from East Germany" (The New York Times Magazine, March 23, 1975) with keen interest. Just back from our second trip to the German Democratic Republic, we hoped you would convey to Times' readers what they have so long been denied: the living reality of the GDR.

Instead we found you speaking of "the Wall", "the Berlin Wall", "the Watchtowers and the Wall" — without telling why "the Wall" is there. Since you give no clue to "the Wall's" real meaning, it appears in your "Letter" as it has in the mass media over the years: a symbol of evil intrinsic to the GDR's social system.

Yet "the Wall" is not an evil but a response to evil: the combined military presence of the world's most reactionary forces, occupying a beachhead of two-thirds of the GDR's capital city at the very center of the nation.

You write that you never ... would have dreamed of predicting a state of affairs in which Communists exercised power in one-third of Germany and a third of Berlin to boot, without the other two-thirds of the Reich and its capital turning socialist inside six months, at the latest.

Why, Stefan Heym, do you speak of "Germany"? Doesn't that have a familiar ring? Isn't it the imperialists who always speak of "Germany", "one Germany", "one German nation"?

One can avoid being absorbed into this nationalist fiction, with its threat of neofascism and war, only by recognizing the existence of two nations: the socialist German Democratic Republic and the capitalist Federal Republic of Germany.

But when one thinks in terms of "Germany", it's easy to take the next illogical step: How could it be, you wonder, that "Communists (exercising) power in one-third of Germany and a third of Berlin" couldn't bring socialism to the other two-thirds "inside six months, at the latest."

A revolution unable to cross from one side of a Berlin street to another — grotesque! Yet that status, a Germany part capitalist and part socialist, has lasted for more than a quarter of a century.

Truly, Stefan Heym, it's "grotesque" to think the GDR would follow your imaginary blueprint for "exporting" revolution to the FRG, and for crossing the street to World War III.

Revolution isn't exported. It's the working class and all democratic forces in the FRG who will carry through the struggle against their "own" ruling class. No, revolution isn't exported; counter-revolution is. Capitalism exports both counter-revolution and war, particularly in its imperialist stage.

Instead of producing the fantasy of a "revolution unable to cross" the street, why not deal with fact: The revolution has forced imperialism to retreat from its objective of crossing borders and crossing "from one side of a Berlin street to another" in order to "roll back Communism". Yet paradoxically you've interpreted this achievement, one of socialism's most significant defeats of imperialism since the October Revolution, as a sign of weakness.

The peace struggles linking the GDR to the Soviet Union and the socialist camp, and the great advances within these countries, have not only been decisive in Europe. The liberation struggles in Africa, Asia and Latin America have been incalculably strengthened because of imperialism's inability to "cross from one side of a Berlin street to the other" via counter-revolution or war.

Oh, yes, one more point. State power in the GDR is not, as you say, "exercised by Communists". It's exercised by the leadership of the working class and its party in alliance with the other GDR parties and people's organizations. And, may we add, it would certainly have been helpful if you'd identified those who hold power in the FRG: the monopolist backers of Nazism, restored to rule by the imperialists who betrayed the Potsdam Agreement.

During the early fifties — a time when imperialism combined its war in Korea with "cold war" elsewhere — you "came to settle" in the GDR. That new nation had rid itself of the Nazi monopolists within but was still confronted by them "on the other side of a Berlin street". Yet you expected to find in the GDR, you tell us, an idyllic existence.

In socialism, so I thought, life would be basically harmonious. The capitalists having been eliminated, everybody would be pulling one way, and the difficulties which struck your eye I analyzed as being endemic to postwar reconstruction: Socialism, good old sensible socialism, would solve them pronto.

Interestingly, you yourself contradict this fantasy of an instant solution by "socialism, good old sensible socialism" (which by the way, didn't yet exist in the GDR) when you acknowledge that the GDR

... started with many handicaps: lack of raw materials, hardly any industry... a population indoctrinated by Dr. Goebbels against anything Communist or Soviet...

The battle to overcome these "handicaps" was a 24-hour one.

In the years after the war, the ruins — as Brecht put it — were not only in the streets but in people's heads. The struggle to reconstruct both streets and heads was led by anti-fascist resistance fighters, back from concentration camps, the underground and exile, with the full support of the Soviet occupation power. Not for a moment did they tolerate a life "basically harmonious" with the survivals of racism, anti-Communism and anti-Sovietism.

In one of its first acts, the Soviet occupation power ordered reopening of the theaters. And the first play staged for "a population indoctrinated by Dr. Goebbels" was Nathan The Wise, whose protagonist is a Jew.

In an exact reversal of what happened in the Western occupation zones, those reflecting fascist ideas were forced out of influential positions. This included virtually all teachers. They were replaced by young men and women who for the most part had little formal education. Trained almost overnight by anti-fascist instructors, these "new teachers" helped educate the new generation in the spirit of peace and internationalism.

Well, Stefan Heym, none of this is news to you. But it would have been to Times' readers. Too bad you didn't tell them about it.

Not so long after your arrival in the GDR, you write:

I began to understand that there were new conflicts, indigenous to socialism, new contradictions that differed fundamentally from those in the capitalist world.

What brought about your changed outlook?

In June, 1953, workers here struck against the workers' state and marched through the streets of Berlin, demonstrating against the workers' government and - incidentally - shattering my illusions.

If these events were "shattering" to your "illusions", their effect on Brecht was quite different. As usual, he devoted himself to shattering other people's illusions.

"When the West Berlin reactionaries, penetrated with the intent of starting a coup, Brecht was at his country home", Werner Hecht told us in Berlin. Hecht, formerly a dramaturge (literary adviser) and a director at the Berliner Ensemble, has written extensively on Brecht and is the editor of Brecht's Work Journal.

"When Brecht heard these events were taking place", Hecht continued, "he returned immediately to Berlin".

Brecht, who was a member of the Ministry of Culture, vicepresident of the Academy of Arts and a leader of the writers' organization, "called a meeting of his colleagues. He came back in order to help lead the fight against these events."

What caused the events of June, 1953, was not, as you assert, "new conflicts indigenous to socialism". Socialism, as we must again point out, did not yet exist in the GDR. The struggle to lay the basis for socialism was just getting under way.

The influence of the past, the survivals of the old antagonistic conflicts, were still strong even in the minds of certain sections of the workers. This made them susceptible to provocation from the Nazi war criminals across the border (and their accomplices within the GDR). Supported by U.S. imperialism, these monopolists were trying to regain that part of the old Germany they had lost.

Those who were "demonstrating against the workers' government" - and the "demonstrators" included many non-workers - had been instigated by forces aiming at counter-revolution.

In your "Letter" you make disparaging remarks about the leaders of the Socialist Unity Party (SED). You condemn them because their interpretation of events contradicts yours. We're grateful that it does! If the SED leadership had seen things your way in June, 1953, the working class would no longer be in power in the GDR.

Of course, mistakes were made in the struggle to lay the basis for socialism. The SED recognized them, as did the other parties of the National Front. That's why the mistakes were corrected.

Despite obvious historical differences, an analogy can be made between the response to attempted counter-revolution by the GDR government in June, 1953, and that of the U.S. government after the Civil War.

The government of the GDR didn't surrender to the attempts at counter-revolution, but continued to fight to build a society free of racism and wage slavery.

The government in Washington betrayed Reconstruction by giving in to the violence of the white-sheeted KKK, predecessors of Hitler's brown shirts. As a result the U.S. is today the world center of racism and reaction.

As for the FRG, it carries on in the tradition of Goering's father, the Kaiser's first Imperial Commissioner in South West Africa (Namibia). That of course is why it's U.S. imperialism's partner in Africa and elsewhere.

"The hardships of the mountains are behind us Before us lie
the hardships of the plains"

So wrote Brecht after his return to Berlin in 1948, foreseeing a new kind of struggle to build a new society. You, on the other hand, visualized a "basically harmonious" life.

But after the "shattering" of your "illusions," you "began to understand that there were new conflicts indigenous to socialism, new contradictions that differed fundamentally from those in the capitalist world."

The "new conflicts indigenous to socialism" do differ "fundamentally from those in the capitalist world" — but not in the way you imply. In socialism there are no antagonistic contradictions because antagonistic classes no longer exist.

Yet so great are the demands of the struggle to build socialism that novelist Anna Seghers believes even Brecht's concept of the "hardships of the plains" is an underestimation.

"Anna Seghers says the workers surmounted one mountain and are now surmounting another," — Gunther Simon told us in Berlin. Simon, who has written a book on Seghers, is an editor of Tribune, newspaper of the GDR trade unions.

You state that much of what you've written concerns the "largely virgin field" of the "new conflicts indigenous to socialism." Far from being your personal discovery, they are the preoccupation of writers in the GDR today. In fact the entire society is involved in thought and action on these conflicts, the stimuli for socialist advance.

That the struggle to build socialism is infinitely complex is well illustrated by an anecdote you tell, although the conclusions you draw from it are very different from ours:

On a train to Rostock you meet Kalle, who works at the Schwarze Pumpe plant. Kalle tells you about his friend Bruno whom he calls a "fool" because,

Bruno has scrimped and saved to buy an apartment... and will bring his wife and kids (to live in it); the moment he turns his back, the Poles who work at Schwarze Pumpe will be at the door of that apartment, and that'll be the end. (Kalle) knows. He has had ample experience with women.

Kalle, you say, is an excellent worker. He's also been taking evening courses and "soon he'll be sent to technical school." You decide:

Here is one of those positive working-class characters whom the country's writers are always being asked to profile. "You're in the party, of course, Kalle," I inquire. He looks at me. "Hell no," he says.

"How come then," you wonder, "the contradiction?" A contradiction because Kalle's not in the party? On the contrary! It's unbelievable that the party would accept Kalle at his present level of consciousness! Why?

Have you forgotten the old chauvinist attitudes: Don't you recognize their survivals in Kalle's fable of the German wife and Polish men?

Perhaps Kalle heard gossip of a married woman involved with another man. But male supremacy multiplied one man into a line at the door, while chauvinism identified that line with another nationality.

Are you unaware of all that the GDR, under the party's leadership, has done to overcome such attitudes? Impossible! Yet you consider it a "contradiction" that a person with such ideas is not a party member!

The party doesn't give up on Kalle. It encourages him, continues to educate him — tries to help him get over the attitudes that make him an anachronism in his generation. Kalle's contradictions would in fact make quite a story.

But the anecdote you tell suggests an even more interesting story, one contrasting the life of non-German workers in the GDR with that of foreign workers in the FRG — who not only have the lowest paying jobs but are socially ostracized. They are the victims of a past that is still the present in West Germany.

Comparisons between life in the GDR and the FRG are certainly useful: they make socialism's advantages so clear. Providing, of course, real comparisons are made.

But is it a real comparison to make a flat statement, as you do, about higher wages "in the West" — without making a comprehensive comparison between prices? And without mentioning free health care, grants for education and subsidized child care centers, vacations, culture, sports, etc., etc., in the GDR?

Of course you do have some good things to say about the GDR's economic situation:

... (there isn't) any inflation biting into the citizens' earnings. The other day at my butcher's I happened to look at the price list on the wall and I was struck by the fly specks on it. The list, including its prices, had not been changed in 15 years, but the supply of meats... had greatly increased both in quantity and variety.

Well, Stefan Heym, if it weren't for "the Wall," two million West Berliners plus that area's NATO military occupiers would be stripping GDR shops bare at non-inflation prices. Still you go on to say,

So as not to appear too lyrical, let me add that you still have trouble getting items that are matter-of-course in the West... I lined up one morning... at a building-materials supply store after learning that a shipment of tiles had come in... I didn't know what type or color... I was the 87th in line.

I got the tile in the proper color — through my Munich publishers.

Perhaps the inconvenience you suffered was eased by the knowledge that the tiles we meant for a house (five rooms plus garden) costing you only about $65 a month "at the official rate of exchange."

Anyway lines are "matter-of-course" in the U.S. And the 87th person to arrive at the unemployment center or food stamp office can be considered quite fortunate, since the lines there will stretch into the horizon before the day is out.

Besides, there are priorities in GDR building materials, aren't there? We saw housing, housing going up everywhere — and the ongoing building of a new Dresden, destroyed by the U.S. air force after the Nazi armies had been shattered primarily by the Red Army. The atom-bombing of Hiroshima and the fire-bombing of Dresden, you'll recall, signaled imperialism's post-war aim of reversing democratic advances.

The citizens of the German Democratic Republic (you write) enjoy the highest living standards within the socialist orbit, and the West Germans, I understand, do pretty well over there in capitalism.... I would say that on either side of the fence the existence of another Germany, of a social alternative, causes a proportionately larger share of the cake to be handed to the greedy masses.

Your message here is quite astounding:

What accounts for the GDR's economic strides, you'd have us believe, is not its social system and links with the Soviet Union and socialist camp — but the proximity of West German monopoly and its NATO partners.

How do these "good neighbors" to the West improve living standards on "either side of the fence"? By forcing the socialist countries to divert vast sums for defense? By placing the armaments burden — including inflation and unemployment — on the peoples of the capitalist countries?

Apparently this upside down vision of reality explains why you speak of "the greedy masses" instead of the greedy monopolists, and of capitalism as an "alternative" to socialism. Yes, capitalism is an "alternative" to socialism — in the sense that war is an "alternative" to peace, fascism to democracy,

There's much more we'd like to say about your "Letter" but space limitations allow us to make only one more comment:

"When you live in a country," you write, "you don't do much reflecting about life there — you simply live it."

Everywhere we went in the GDR we met women and men who were "reflecting about life" with the intensity of a people making their own history.

MORE COMMENTS ON W.BERLIN

The main GDR newspaper "Neues Deutschland" continued the controversy about West Berlin in a commentary published on May 30th. (For previous statements and comments, see GERMAN REPORT dated June 4th). The comment stated in part:

"The foreign ministers of the Western Powers have done a disservice to the Federal Government in Bonn. At a 'Germany Meeting' held in Paris they issued, together with Herr Genscher (West German Foreign Minister, ed.) a joint statement emphasising the 'Four Power status of Berlin'. Although they know better, they have emphasised something which does not exist.

"The question arises as to what this theatrical performance is in aid of; all participants know full well a Bonn grab at West Berlin, let alone Berlin, is an adventure which would not even suit the USA, France and Britain...

"Nothing can alter the fact that since 1949 Berlin has been the capital of the German Democratic Republic. If this reality has not been grasped in Bonn, it is a matter of common knowledge that the German Democratic Republic has every opportunity to make this even clearer to Bonn.

"Apparently it is necessary to explain once again the realities which form part of the basic factors of peace and security on our continent; particularly since Herr Genscher and Herr Schütz, Ruling Mayor of West Berlin, commented upon the Paris declaration with the words: 'Now everything is clear'. But concoctions do not become clearer, however many times they are repeated.

"What is absolutely clear is the fact that Berlin is the capital of the German Democratic Republic. Our capital is an inseparable and integral part of the German Democratic Republic and has precisely the same legal status as every other part of the territory of the German Democratic Republic. France, Britain and the USA possess no 'original' non-treaty rights with regard to Berlin, and never possessed such rights.

rated out of the former Soviet Occupation Zone. The Four Powers confirmed these facts by concluding the Quadripartite Agreement on West Berlin.

"The situation of West Berlin is equally clear, though completely different. Its status and its relationships are defined in the Quadripartite Agreement. West Berlin, which lies on the territory of the German Democratic Republic, is thus a special entity that 'continues not to be a constituent part of the Federal Republic of Germany and not to be governed by it'.

"(West Berlin is a special entity..." The word here rendered as "entity" is in the original German "Gebilde", which has a wide range of meanings. The authoritative Langenscheidt Dictionary of 1974 gives a wide selection, including: thing, form, shape, work, creation, product, structure, pattern, figure, entity, instrumentality, formation. Calling West Berlin a "thing" might be soul-satisfying, but "entity" appears linguistically most acceptable, ed.)

"There are the clear facts. Everyone knows that the recognition of these facts, the taking into account of these facts, has been advantageous, and this not solely for the population of West Berlin who are directly affected. This has also been of great importance for the development of the process of detente... It is obviously necessary that all participants and interested parties should approach the questions constructively so that the Quadripartite Agreement may function effectively in the future also...

"We must counter decisively all attempts to reverse these results, to subvert international agreements, and to return to the practices of the 'cold war'. It is simply political blindness to attempt to invoke the Quadripartite Agreement on one hand, and on the other hand to infringe it."

The same subject was dealt with on June 3rd in a commentary circulated by TASS, the official Soviet news agency. The commentary pointed out that the Quadripartite Agreement of 1971 had now been in a considerable part in improving the general international climate. The commentary continued:

"At the same time there have been repeated attempts in the west to act against the word and the spirit of the agreement.

"One of these acts is undoubtedly the recent declaration made in Paris by the foreign ministers of the USA, Britain, France and the FRG claiming that quadripartite status extends to 'the whole of Berlin', that is including the capital of the GDR.

"It must first of all be emphasised that the thesis about quadripartite status, left behind by the cold war, has nothing in common with actual facts, political reality. It is a matter of common knowledge that West Berlin stands under the administration of the occupation authorities of the USA, Britain and France; but that (East) Berlin has been, for a quarter of a century, the capital of a sovereign state, the GDR, and an integral and inseparable part of its territory. It is thus clear that it is absolutely unjust to measure West Berlin and the GDR capital with the same ell, and that the thesis that quadripartite administration extends to "the whole of Berlin" is completely untenable.

"It is also noteworthy that the Paris declaration was made not in the name of the three states USA, Britain and France, but in the name of four states — it was also signed by FRG Foreign Minister Genscher. This is at least disconcerting, since neither West Berlin nor Berlin capital of the GDR belong to the FRG, and it is not up to Genscher to interpret questions outside his competence.

"The Quadripartite Agreement is a plain and definite international document, which must be strictly adhered to and fully applied. All attempts to 'interpret it anew' can only damage international detente, and stability in Europe."

Re: STEFAN HEYM

REC-1

The October 23, 1959 issue (Volume VIII, No. 22) of "Democratic German Report," an English language magazine published in East Berlin, Germany, contained the following article which refers to the subject:

"BIRTHDAY HONOURS

"Workers, scientists, politicians and artists who have contributed greatly to the successes attained during the first 10 years of existence of the German Democratic Republic were awarded titles and prizes in connexion with the birthday celebrations.

The majority of the prizes, including the National Prize, the Banner of Labour and titles such as Labour Hero, were awarded to teams of scientists, technicians and workers who have done outstanding work in the industrial field.

Prizes awarded in the arts included National Prizes for Anna Seghers (author of 'The Seventh Cross'); Stefan Heym (author of 'The Crusaders'); Eduard von Winterstein (theatre veteran who has just celebrated his 70th stage anniversary); and the team of architects, sculptors, etc., responsible for the imposing memorial erected on the site of Buchenwald concentration camp.

Prizes for outstanding film work went to the teams responsible for the films 'Stars' and 'They Called Him Amigo', both of them timely reminders of the crimes committed by the nazis."

Reds Plan Film On Tower Sinking

Reuters

EAST BERLIN, March 16—Communist East Germany will make a feature movie about the sinking of the American radar tower, "Texas Four," off the New Jersey coast in January.

A spokesman for the state-owned film company, Defa, said
 German-American novelist Stefan Heym, who lives in East Germany, is working on a script for the film, which will tell the "full story" of the disaster, in which 28 men lost their lives.

"We believe this to be first-class material for an anti-war film," he said. "But it will not be anti-American and we hope it will be a world-wide success."

"Hostages," a novel, was received on October 22, 1942, from the publishers, G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York. It has been reviewed by Agent [redacted] of this Section who feels it is the most fascinating, realistic, enlightening, and deeply impressive novel that has come out of this war. It is the reviewer's opinion that it ranks with Margaret Mitchell's "Gone With The Wind" as far as human interest and detailed description of the moving characters of the book are concerned.

The scene of the story is Prague, Czechoslovakia, following the Nazi occupation. There is a riot at the University in Prague. A number of students are wounded and killed. Milada Markova is wounded by gunfire. Her lover, Pavel, is killed. A German officer, Lt. Glasenapp, rescued her after the riot and saved her life. Milada is grateful. Glasenapp falls in love with Milada and promises to look for her lover, knowing full well he is dead.

Infuriated at Glasenapp's lies she accused him of killing Pavel and heaped her pent up invective upon him. He threatened he would kill himself. Subsequently he became very drunk and proceeded to a riverfront cafe with two other German officers. He left them at the bar and proceeded downstairs to the men's room. He then completely disappeared. His two officer friends became alarmed, called the Secret Police and arrested every person in the room, twenty in all, and held them as hostages.

Glasenapp's body was recovered from the river by the Gestapo who found a note in his pocket clearly indicating suicide. Reinhardt, the Gestapo "protector" in Prague was upset to find it was suicide. He ignores the evidence, issues an ultimatum that unless the murderer is found in five days the hostages will be shot. He advised Heydrich, his chief, that it is a clear case of murder and gets his approval to shoot the hostages.

The main part of the story is woven around five of the hostages who are thrown together in the same cell; e. g., Lev. Preissinger, Director-General of the Bohemian-Moravian Coal Syndicate, a traitor who had sold Czechoslovakia out to the Germans to protect his coal interests; Janoshik, a peasant patriot, janitor at the riverfront cafe where Glasenapp committed suicide and had, at one time, labored in one of Pressinger's coal mines and hated Pressinger; Dr. Wallerstein, a psychiatrist; Prokosch, an actor filled to the brim with his own ego and his dead wife's faithfulness to him; Lobkowitz, a journalist who tired of Prokosch's bragging and confessed in jail that Prokosch's wife was unfaithful, that he, Lobkowitz, was the father of her child.

Janoshik, by his antics and subtle anecdotes, fools Rhinehardt into thinking he is a dumb nit-wit. He devises a scheme to get out of jail long enough to get a message to the underground to blow up certain ammunition barges. He knows the heavy price he will pay in the torture chamber of the Gestapo for his deceptive plot but the consequences do not deter him. When Rhinehardt finds Janoshik has fooled him he personally directs Janoshik's punishment. Janoshik is beat^{en} to a pulp with a steel whip, his teeth are knocked out, his nose is broken, his eye is gouged out, and his fingers are broken, but he refuses to cry out. He recovers enough to speak words of encouragement to his fellow hostages and limps unaided to the execution wall where he is shot.

Rhinehardt, failing to obtain the exact information he desires from Milada puts a Czech traitor on her trail to shadow her day and night. The traitor is spotted by Milada's underground patriot friend, Breda, who accidentally lets a crane crush him to death.

Milada is arrested and brought to Rhinehardt's office where, after questioning her and knocking her unconscious, he proceeds to rape her.

Breda learns of Glasenapp's suicide from Milada and exposes Rhinehardt's diabolical plot over the radio a few hours before the hostages are to be executed.

But Rhinehardt was determined to carry out the execution in order to get Lev Pressinger, the coal tycoon, out of the way so some of his own friends in Germany could take over the Bohemian-Moravian Coal Syndicate with no strings attached.

Memo for Mr. Nichols

Milada, who had just recovered consciousness in Rhinehardt's office heard Breda's voice on the radio and became so exuberant that Rhinehardt became furious and advised she would be forced to witness the execution of the twenty hostages at dawn. He carried out his threat but Milada showed her spirit and stood by.

As the last shots echoed from the firing squad and Janoshik slid to the ground, terrific explosions were heard. Janoshik's sacrifice had not been in vain--the ammunition barges had been blown up. Rhinehardt became panicky and cowered on the floor. In the confusion Milada escaped.

Heydrich, upon learning of Rhinehardt's plot being exposed on the radio followed closely by the blowing up of the ammunition barges requested Rhinehardt's resignation and transferred him to the Russian front where he felt sure Rhinehardt would be killed.

The book exposes in a clear picture the brutality, egotism, ruthlessness and inhumaness of the Germans in occupied countries. It is well worth reading.

Respectfully,

Stefan Heym, Anti-Nazi Author, To Be American Army Private

Stefan Heym, author of the popular anti-Nazi book, "Hostages," got his first idea for his novel when his father was made a hostage by Hitler in 1933.

In Washington for a reception given by Mme. Vladimir S. Hurban, wife of the Czechoslovakian Minister to the United States, at the Legation, Mr. Heym said he is already at work on his second book, which will deal with "homegrown fascists" in the United States.

Mr. Heym escaped from the Nazis in 1933 into Czechoslovakia. There he stayed for two years, writing for newspapers and doing a dramatic production of "Tom Sawyer," which was shown in Vienna and Prague. In 1935 he obtained a scholarship to the University of Chicago, where he received his M. A. degree.

His chief accomplishment in New York in the next few years, he said, was to expose Fritz Kuhn, Nazi bund leader, in the act of embezzling funds of his own organization. Mr. Heym published this story in 1937 in his anti-Fascist German paper, the German People's Echo. Three years later the American Government sent Kuhn to jail on the same charge, he said.

Next month Mr. Heym, who is 29 years old, will become Pvt. Heym in the United States Army. Until that time he will continue to live in New York and work on his second book.

"Hostages" tells of the lives of five Czechoslovakians facing certain death in the Gestapo prison cells. His three purposes in writing the book were to show the resistance of the Czech people to the Nazis, the workings of the Nazi mind and the psychological processes in the behavior of men facing death.

Books of the Times

By ORVILLE PRESCOTT

ARE American soldiers, gallant, resourceful and efficient though they are, just so many innocents abroad? Well-intentioned, kindly, unsuspecting, naively credulous, have they no understanding of the ancient evils, the duplicities and treacheries, the hatreds and moral quagmires that lie about them in Africa, Asia and Europe? Do they carry their native folklore with them so that they really believe that a man is innocent until proved guilty, that a Vichy official is a misunderstood patriot and a Gestapo officer an honorable enemy? The answer to these questions would seem to be yes, judging from the testimony of several recent publications by exiled European writers who gravely fear that Americans do not yet realize either the real nature of their foes or the real issues of this conflict. Americans bred in a tradition of sportsmanship and fair play still find it difficult to believe the evidence, the torture chambers, the mass graves, the extermination camps. They still are bewildered by "gentlemen" who prize their positions of power and privilege more than their freedom or their honor.

One young writer who is doing his best to explain these matters in terms of black and white is Stefan Heym, whose "Hostages" was one of the most powerful novels yet written about the German terror and the underground resistance movements. Mr. Heym is a German exile who is now a sergeant in the United States Army. Somehow, in addition to his military duties, he has found time to write a second novel, "Of Smiling Peace."* It is a story of intrigue, treachery and war in Algeria and Tunisia that emphasizes the psychological and moral gulf that separates us from our foes; it emphasizes equally strongly the necessity of looking all around us as well as ahead for those who worship personal power and despise the people. Even a German exile who had fought in the International Brigade in Spain, the hero of "Of Smiling Peace," was not suspicious and alert enough. No wonder some of his American comrades were overtrusting and sadly guileless.

Duplicity in Algiers

In Algiers as the American forces occupied the city and captured the German Armistice Commission two nasty birds of a feather plotted to destroy them. Maj. Ludwig von Liszt, a member of the German General Staff, was no mere Nazi gangster. An aristocrat from an old family whose sons had always been officers, he combined neurotic instability, brilliant daring and childish egotism with the usual German arrogance, brutality and deceit. He was determined to escape to the German lines in Tunisia with news of the plot he had hatched with Col. Jules Marie Monaitre.

The colonel was a Vichy supporter and a German collaborator, as well as the leader of a desert army with an unsavory reputation for vicious cruelty. If he would attack the Americans from the desert the Germans would have much less trouble in defeating them from Tunisia. That was fine with the colonel, particularly after the Americans "appeased" him by putting him in the provisional government with the rank of brigadier general. It was more good luck than good management that just as a precautionary measure the colonel was put under honorary house arrest. Otherwise, the fat would have been in the fire.

Mr. Heym has not been content to focus his attention upon his two villains, but has divided it among a number of other major characters: Lieutenant Wolff, the Spanish veteran, now a G-2 investigator, who scented trouble but did not know quite where to look for it; Marguerite, who loved von Liszt for unaccountable reasons, perhaps because she had got in the habit of loving many men; Jarez, the professional stool pigeon and spy; Sgt. Shadow McManus, a brave and efficient non-com who was frankly bewildered by war and the need to kill.

Story Moves in Spiral Fashion

"Of Smiling Peace" moves rapidly forward, but more in a spiral than a straight line. Mr. Heym never writes for more than a dozen pages or so without shifting his scene to another part of the battle (alarms and excursions offstage) and thus rotating his attention impartially among the members of his large cast. The result is choppy, fragmentary and disconcerting. One rarely doubts that each interlude is true enough to the spirit of the African war, but many of them seem immaterial and irrelevant. It is a clumsy way of telling a story, particularly when quite extraneous characters are introduced for a page or two and then allowed to disappear from sight, never to be heard from again.

So, in spite of an abundance of violent plot, espionage, murder, flight, pursuit and bloodshed, "Of Smiling Peace" fails to hold together in a sustained narrative. It is not as continuously exciting as a good spy story should be. In spite of its sincere and highly pertinent political thesis, it is too dull to be of much interest as a work of fiction. Perhaps if it had been written better, with more skill and care, if its characters had been better integrated and less shadowy, "Of Smiling Peace" would have been more effective. But, unfortunately, it has none of the emotional power, none of the horrible drama, none of the terrible tension that made "Hostages" so absorbing.

"OF SMILING PEACE." By Stefan Heym. 361 pages. Little, Brown. $2.50.

FUCHS was also a German of Jewish origin, a rabbi by profession who fled to Argentina and subsequently to the United States. Mr. and Mrs. Fuchs were at the time of the inquiry conducted by [] residing at 870 Riverside Drive, New York City.

The subject attended grammar school in the town of his birth from 1919 to 1923. In succession, from 1923 to 1931 he studied at the Staats Gymnasium, Berlin; from 1932 to 1933, the University of Berlin. At the latter school he was a science student under one KARL VON OSSIETSKY who is noted for having received the Nobel Peace Prize while in a Nazi concentration camp. During this time the subject admittedly was a prolific anti-Nazi writer and because of his writings was obliged, in 1933, to flee to Czechoslovakia. He remained in Prague until 1935.

HEYM was awarded a graduate scholarship by the University of Chicago as a student in Germany whose education had been interrupted by the Nazis. He entered the United States in 1935 and received an MA degree from the University of Chicago in 1936. While in Chicago, he was employed by the Academy for Adults as a German language instructor and by Carson, Pirie, Scott Company as a book salesman.

From 1937 to 1939 he was editor of a German language newspaper published by the Volksecko Publishing Company, 20 Vesey Street, New York City. This paper was described by the Daily Worker of February 27, 1937 as "A new German newspaper to fight the Nazis in the United States." Subsequently, the newspaper suspended publication because of a lack of funds. A letter was addressed to subscribers requesting them to subscribe to Volkfront published in Chicago. The latter organ, according to [] was, in 1936, a Communist front publication. b2

From 1939 through 1941 HEYM was employed by the New Union Press, 119 Fourth Avenue, New York City, as a printing salesman. He occupied a similar position in 1941 and 1942 with the Herald Square Press, 323 Spring Street, New York City.

HEYM was inducted into the United States Army on March 11, 1943 at Fort Dix, New Jersey.

By virtue of a decree of the Supreme Court of the State of New York his name was changed on April 30, 1943 from HELMUT FLIEG to STEFAN HEYM.

On May 26, 1943 he was naturalized by the Circuit Court of Newton County, Neosho, Missouri.

He served in the European Theater of the war from April, 1944 until the latter part of 1945 and was released from active duty as a reserve officer of the United States Army on December 24, 1945 at the installation where he was originally inducted.

The subject [redacted] has corroborated the largest part of the information set forth above [redacted] In addition, the subject has advised [redacted] that he resided in Missouri and Maryland during a part of 1943 and 1944. Following his discharge from the Army in 1945 he spent some time in Mexico during the year 1946. He has indicated to the informant that while in Mexico he was in contact with [redacted] [redacted] has also been advised by HEYM that in March, 1944 he married [redacted] at Hagerstown, Maryland.

In 1942 HEYM published his first novel in America. The publisher was the Little, Brown and Company in Boston and the book was entitled "Hostages." It was remarkably successful for a first novel. [redacted] the New York Post on June 2, 1946 carried a news item reflecting that the book had been made into a drama by the Soviet army and used as a morale booster for its troops.

Shortly after discharge from the Army HEYM published his second book, "Of Smiling Peace." HEYM has further advised [redacted] that while in the Army he received the Bronze Star for his work with the Psychological Warfare Branch of the United States 12th Army.

b7C "New Masses" magazine at that time was a Communist publication. In his b7D review [] quotes the subject as stating "neither [] nor [] are Marxists but they have learned from Marx; every historian, if he is an honest historian, has learned from Marx."

b2 [] further reported that in a formal debate sponsored by the German-American League in New York City HEYM argued in favor of Communism.

b7D The New York Division has furnished the following information received from because of his alien status.

b2 [] confidential informant [] declared that b6 STEFAN HEYM was a fellow traveler and sympathizer with the Communist Party.

b6 The New York Journal American for October 22, 1946 carried a news story b7C concerning HEYM by HOWARD RUSHMORE which was headlined "Red Plot to Rule b7D Writers Aided by Reich Communist." The story then identified HEYM and pointed to his activity in the Authors League where he was allegedly supporting the left wing movement. The story said in part "HEYM, who was in Germany when the Reds greeted Hitler as a revolutionist, came to this country and worked closely with top Communist leaders at Red Fascist National Headquarters, 35 East 12 Street (the address of the national headquarters of the Communist Party of the United States). He was appointed liaison man to the German Red literary movement by the Communist Party's National Committee. HEYM met incoming German Communists and instructed them on the "Party line" to pursue in this nation. Some of the agents HEYM contacted were STALIN's international agents. It was also learned that while engaged in this work HEYM wrote a pamphlet, "Nazis in the USA" for the pro-Communist organization "American Committee for anti-Nazi Literature." This group disbanded when Hitler signed a non-aggression pact with Stalin in 1939."

WRITINGS, CONTACTS AND MORE RECENT ACTIVITIES

b2 As indicated above, HEYM is the author of "Hostages" and "Of Smiling Peace."
b7D As noted above "Hostages" was regarded favorably by the Soviet Army in wartime. [] was of the personal opinion that "Of Smiling Peace" sustained Marxist ideology.

Both of these books were published by the Little Brown Publishing Company of Boston, Massachusetts, whose authors of non-fiction in recent years, according to [] have included a number of persons of admitted Communist sympathy. The subject advised [] that he is closely acquainted with the following persons: []

[] the subject advised [] that [] the same publishing company would produce his latest book "The Crusaders." He anticipated that beginning in May the book would be serialized in "Mainstream."

"The Crusaders" was published and released in September, 1948. The book was reviewed most favorably in the New York Herald Tribune, the New York Times and the Boston Herald. In the October 4, 1948 issue of the New York Times it occupied a highly favorable position on the Best Seller List. The position of the book on this list was especially notable in view of the fact that the work was not a promotion of any of the numerous book clubs.

Special Employee [] reviewed the book and judged it from his own experiences with the Army of the United States in the same areas of operation which are the scenes of this novel. The book portrays the efforts of the Propaganda Intelligence Units to convince the German Army they were fighting for a lost cause and that the Americans would be victorious because they knew for what they were fighting. In portraying his characters, Special Employee [] found that the author developed a conflict of emotions which left the reader with the impression that some of those in our armed forces were in doubt if they were engaged in a crusade or a conquest. Special Employee [] further noted that the author pictured his characters in the extreme and did not strike what might well be regarded as a normal or average United States soldier and officer. The author plays up, from [] experiences, the black market activities during the campaigns and the Occupation period. He stresses to the point of exaggeration, in Special Employee [] opinion, the alleged privileges and rights of officers as contrasted to the enlisted personnel. Throughout the work there is the subtle presentation of the idea that democracy has not yet been found by the world, but that when it is it will be a cure for the evils in the world.

b7C

The subject [] shortly after the publication of the book advised that the Cultural Attache of the Czechoslovakian Consulate General in New York City had advised him that the Syndicate of Czech Writers in Prague had decided to place HEYM's books with the Czechoslovakian Publishers. This amounts to approval of the current Czech Government of the works of this author []

he was endeavoring to have "The Crusaders" published first and was hopeful that sufficient revenues would be derived to enable him to finance a stay in Czechoslovakia. HEYM [] anticipated spending a considerable amount of time in that country in the immediate future for the purpose of doing research work for another novel. []

Heym was born on April 10, 1913, at Chemnitz, Germany, and is a graduate of the University of Berlin. He resided in Germany until 1933 when, because of his writings, he became a political refugee. He lived in Czechoslovakia from 1933 to 1935, in Chicago, Illinois, from 1935 until 1937, in New York City from 1937 to 1942, and in Missouri and Maryland during 1943 and part of 1944. He served with the United States Army in England, France, Luxemburg, and Holland as well as Belgium and Germany until the middle of 1946. He resided for a time in Mexico.

Heym is alleged by informants to have been a Comintern agent at one time. Investigation conducted by us reveals that he has had contact with known Communists and has associated with suspected Communists. We recently learned that Heym departed from Halifax, Nova Scotia, on November 18, 1948, destined for Rotterdam, Holland, where he was to remain for some time. It is not known if he has returned to this country as yet. We understand that while he was abroad he intended to visit Czechoslovakia among other countries in Europe. The exact purpose of his trip is unknown. However, it is understood that he intended to do research work for a new novel.

It would be appreciated if you would advise us if you have received any information concerning Heym's activities while abroad. (A)

It should be noted that the subject's wife, GERTRUDE GELBIN, is believed to be identical with an individual who formerly resided at 244 East 15th Street, who was reported in the "Daily Worker" of January 23, 1943, Page 5 Column 2, as having been recently elected as a secretary of the Screen Publicist Guild, New York Local 114, UOPWA. The March 25, 1943 "Daily Worker" on Page 2 carried her name on a list of one hundred union leaders under the caption, "Hit An Anti-Soviet Smear In The Alter - Erlich Case".

By Albany report concerning the above captioned subject dated March 18, 1949, information was set out to the effect that Immigration and Naturalization records concerning the sailing of the SS VEENDAM from Halifax, Nova Scotia on November 18, 1948, reflected that STEFAN HEYM, passport number 267006, along with his wife, GERTRUDE, was travelling tourist class with Rotterdam as their destination.

The March 21, 1949 issue of the "Daily Worker" in Column 4 of Page 7 sets out the name STEFAN HEYM as being among those writers and editors sponsoring the Cultural and Scientific Conference for Peace, which was scheduled to be held March 25 through March 27, 1949 in New York City.

Re: STEFAN HEYM
SECURITY MATTER - C

Dear Sir:

LOUIS F. BUDENZ, formerly managing editor of the "Daily Worker" and a Communist Party functionary until he broke with the Party in October, 1945 has been interviewed during the past few months concerning the concealed Communists whom he knew. The person named above as the subject of this case was one of those individuals whom BUDENZ described as a concealed Communist. BUDENZ describes a concealed Communist as one who does not hold himself out as a Communist and who would deny membership in the Party.

BUDENZ advised SA [redacted] on June 19th, 1951 of all he knew concerning the subject, that he felt was pertinent, and he dictated this information to a stenographer of this office, who was present during the interview.

b7C

He used, in order to bring out all he knew about the subject, the following set of questions. He considered all questions in connection with this subject. Where he did not comment on some particular question as to the activity of the subject, then it is because he had no knowledge. If he recalled anything about the subject as a result of these questions he dictated what he knew. The questions are as follows:

A review of rerep reflects that on page 2 under the sub-heading, "Citizenship and Birth Data", there are three errors which should be corrected as follows:

1. Line 5: "July 29, 193₆" instead of, "July 29, 193₅".

Czechoslovakia and England for the purpose of business. In his passport application, dated August 19, 1948, at New York City, the subject stated that he intended to depart from the Port of New York about October, 1948, via the Holland-American Line. This passport was not valid for travel to military occupied areas or Yugoslavia. (u)

The subject stated in his application that he was born on April 10, 1913, at Chemnitz, Germany; immigrated to the United States in 1937; resided continuously in the United States from 1937 to 1948 at New York, and was naturalized as a citizen of the United States before the Circuit Court of Newton County, Neosho, Missouri, on May 26, 1943. The passport application bears a notation that the subject's original Certificate of Naturalization #5645296, reflecting a name change from HELMUT FLIEG as part of the naturalization, was seen by passport authorities. The subject listed his permanent residence as 441 East 20th Street, New York City, and his mailing address as Apartment 5E at that same address. (u)

The subject listed his father as DANIEL FLIEG, born at Schrimm, Germany, was not an American citizen and is now deceased. The subject listed his mother as ELSI FUCHS, born at Thum, Germany, in 1892, naturalized as a citizen of the United States before the District Court at New York City in 1947, and at the time of the application was residing at 66 Fort Washington Avenue, New York City. The subject stated that he was last married on March 4, 1944, to GERTRUDE PELTYN, who was born at Tremont, Pennsylvania, on March 8, 1900, and at the time of the application was residing with him. He indicated that this marriage had not been terminated. The identifying witness to his application was GERTRUDE HEYM, his wife, who had known him for six years. (u)

In an accompanying letter dated August 19, 1948, to the Department of State in support of passport applications by himself and his wife, the subject stated that he is an author. He also stated in this letter that his book, which would be published in this country in September, 1948, would be published in translation in several European countries, and it was necessary for him to discuss business and literary details with European publishers. He also advised that the book that he was planning to do after the one published in September would be set against a European background, and that it was necessary for him to do a considerable amount of research in that connection. (u)

On June 8, 1949, the Department of State advised the American Embassies at Praha, London, Paris and The Hague that the subject is a suspected Comintern Agent and Communist propagandist who lived in Czechoslovakia from 1933 to 1935. On August 31, 1951, the Embassy at Praha informed the Department that the official Czechoslovakian news agency, Ceteka, reported on August 23, 1951, that one STEFAN HEYM, described as an American progressive writer, attended a ceremony at the National Theater in Prague on August 22, 1951. (U) - Per part 2 FOIA (U)

It is pointed out that the dates of re-entry of American citizens to the United States are recorded in their passports by immigration authorities at the port of entry. Under current passport regulations, a passport is retained by the bearer until he desires to apply for a new one, at which time the old passport is submitted for cancellation. Since the passport book is the only document which contains the actual date of return to the United States, it was not possible to ascertain from the files of the Passport Division the dates and ports of subject's departure from and return to this country. (U)

It is also noted that the subject's passport expired on August 27, 1950, but could have been renewed for an additional two year period. [redacted] b6 [redacted] Passport Division, advised that if a renewal application has b7C been filed by the subject, it has not as yet reached the subject's passport file. (U)

Stop notices concerning the subject are being placed in the files of the Passport Division, United States Department of State, and with the United States Bureau of Customs. (U)

The following description of the subject was taken from his passport application dated August 19, 1948: (U)

Height: 5' 11"
Hair: Brown
Eyes: Grey
Marks: None
Occupation: Author.

ENCLOSURES:

TO NEW YORK:

FORMER CHICAGO WRITER

Stefan Heym Quits U.S., Joins Reds

STEFAN HEYM

Stefan Heym, onetime Chicago writer, saw visions of "fleas and spiders" serving as American soldiers and has fled to communism to escape them.

Heym, who came to Chicago in 1935 from eastern Germany, announced through the Communist East German press Wednesday he had been granted "not only asylum but citizenship" by the puppet regime now ruling East Germany on orders from Moscow.

His reason: "I am not prepared to serve shoulder to shoulder in the Army of the United States with fleas and spiders carrying epidemic bacteria, and with convicted Nazi war criminals."

He said he had sent President Eisenhower his commission in the Army reserve and a Bronze Star he won in World War II for service in the Ardennes fighting.

"It is impossible," Heym reckoned, "for me to keep this order which has been dishonored in the brutal and unjust war against the Korean people."

Heym was born in Chemnitz, Germany, 40 years ago.

The statement said that the "course of fascism and war which the government of the United States is pursuing with increasingly sharp measures, makes it virtually impossible for honorable people to engage in writing activities in the United States and publish their works."

He said a writer born in the United States had either to "write what the FBI, the State Department and Wall Street want, and lose his integrity, or write the truth and suffer the consequences when his works are suppressed."

Foreign-born writers like himself, he added, can either "keep silent about the imperialistic war being prepared and already begun, or oppose this policy and thereby lose their American citizenship and spend a long time at Ellis Island or in other concentration camps before finally being deported."

"I have therefore," Heym added, "left the United States."

Four years earlier he had attacked the German-American bund in a book called "Nazi in the U.S.A."

Writer Disowns U. S.

Stefan Heym, Leftist, Takes Red Citizenship

Heym, Left-Wing writer who served in the United States Army in World War II, announced today that he has been granted political asylum and citizenship in Communist-ruled East Germany.

In a statement distributed by the official Soviet zone news agency, the forty-year-old German-born author—a member of the American Reserve Officer's Corps—said he was “not prepared to serve shoulder to shoulder in the Army of the United States with fleas and spiders carrying epidemic bacteria and with convicted Nazi war criminals.”

Heym, who fled from Germany in 1933 when Adolf Hitler seized power and emigrated to Chicago in 1935, asserted that the United States government was now following “a course of Fascism and war.”

“I have returned to the President my commission in the Reserve Officers Corps of the Army of the United States,” he said. “At the same time, I have returned to the President the Bronze Star I was awarded in the second world war for service in the battle of the Ardennes.”

“It is impossible for me to keep this order, which has been dishonored in the brutal and unjust war against the Korean people.”

Heym's announcement caught State Department officials in Berlin by surprise. The American Consulate passport officer said he was not aware that Heym had come to Germany and had no information about him.

Heym's statement, as bitterly anti-American as anything ever published by the Communist East German press said:

“The course of Fascism and war, which the government of the United States is pursuing with increasingly sharp measures, makes it virtually impossible for honorable people to engage in writing activities in the United States and publish their works.”

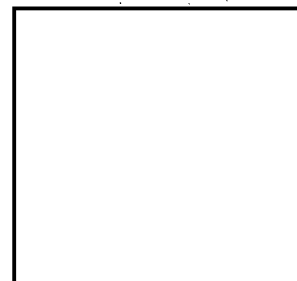

Stefan Heym, Left-Wing author who announced yesterday in Berlin that he had been granted political asylum in East Germany.

"The American-born writer has the choice either to write what the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the State Department and Wall Street want, and lose his integrity, or to write the truth and suffer the consequences when his works are suppressed.

"For the foreign-born American-born writer, there is the choice either to keep silent about the events in his adopted fatherland and the imperialistic war being prepared and already begun, or to oppose this policy and thereby lose his American citizenship and spend a long time at Ellis Island or in other concentration camps before finally being deported.

"I have therefore left the United States and sought asylum in the German Democratic Republic for my family and myself. I have been granted not only asylum, but citizenship. I am thankful that here in the German Democratic Republic the holiest of rights is that of the citizen to work for peace, freedom and democracy. I am thankful that I can here write further on behalf of these aims."

Reurlet to captioned subject 11/30/54

On 12/7/54 [redacted] advised SAS [redacted] that from [redacted] she was outside the United States visiting [redacted] who reside in [redacted]

b6

b7C

While [redacted] stated that [redacted] told her of an American citizen by the name of STEFAN HEYM who resided nearby in [redacted] a large house with his wife and a housekeeper. [redacted] said she was anxious to visit Mr. HEYM and one day [redacted] decided to call on him.

b6

b7C

STEFAN HEYM was not at home when [redacted] called but his wife, who appeared highly nervous at the visit [redacted] spoke to her for a few moments and asked [redacted] the purpose of her visit. [redacted] replied that she was merely paying a social call since she had heard that Mr. HEYM was an American citizen. She was unable to elicit any further information from Mrs. HEYM who abruptly terminated the conversation.

b6

b7C

[redacted] furnished the following description of Mrs. STEFAN HEYM: 50 yrs. old, 5'4", 145 lbs., stocky build, grey-black hair, brown eyes, round face, speaks German with definite American accent.

b6

b7C

[redacted] advised the interviewing agents that she had learned [redacted] that STEFAN HEYM, reportedly an American citizen, had been residing in the Eastern Sector for approximately five years and was known to be a Communist.

b6

b7C

At this point, [redacted] produced a copy of a German language Communist newspaper, published in the Eastern Sector and entitled "Berliner Zeitung." This newspaper carried an article noting that STEFAN HEYM, Author and Lecturer, was scheduled as a speaker at a rally to be held in honor of the fiftieth birthday of EUGENE DENNIS, Communist Leader in America.

[redacted] stated that she never saw STEFAN HEYM and therefore was unable to identify him with a picture of STEFAN HEYM which was displayed to her (NY file 100-89165; Bufile 100-1112236). However, it would seem that they are identical due to the fact that on 4/15/53 the Soviet Zone German Press stated that one, STEFAN HEYM, described as an author and reputedly an American citizen, had requested political asylum in the Russian sector.

[redacted] further advised that she would willingly join the Communist Party in Germany in order to furnish to the FBI any information she might be able to obtain about STEFAN HEYM or any other individuals residing in East Germany in whom the U.S. Government might have an interest.

b7C

During the interview, [redacted] was, on several occasions, advised by the interviewing agents that any such assistance would be strictly voluntary, that her membership in any organization cannot be sponsored or sanctioned by the FBI, that she could not consider herself an employee of the FBI or an "Undercover Agent" of the FBI.

[redacted] emphasized that she was aware of this situation and further advised that she understood that any thing she decided to do would be strictly on her own initiative and not have any connection with the FBI.

However, it was not possible to determine if [redacted] is identical with the subject of the above file since she furnished little information concerning [redacted] [redacted] further advised that [redacted] no one else knows of her contact with the FBI and stated that she would keep strictly confidential her contact with the FBI. No further action is being taken by the NYO in this matter.

THESE ARE THE LANDS OF ANXIETY

MOSCOW

WHEN you travel West from Moscow, always following the setting sun, you finally reach the Lands of Anxiety.

It is there that people look with apprehension toward the next morning of their lives.

Will they still have work? Will the patterns they knew and have lived in still function?

Or will all the fretting and worrying have been for nothing, anyhow, because the "Big Bang" has come, consuming all life in its mushroom-shaped cloud?

It is not a nice world to have to live in, and if I were a young man in one of the Lands of Anxiety, I might resent it deeply and be ready to turn against the general fight of two world wars.

by Stefan Heym

without apparently learning a damned thing from them, so that today the threat of a war of extinction hangs over my head.

I might become cynical, believe in nothing, and try to get as much thrill as possible out of my days—rock 'n' rolling, speeding, knifing, hurting, hating, in a noisy but inarticulate revolt against something that is big and evil and stupid and petty all at the same time.

And if I were a young writer I might join the so-called "Angry Young Men" literary movement, which articulates that revolt and spends its anger in the witticisms of frustration, and believes "that there are no good causes left to fight for."

I might . . .

Moods

BUT I don't live in the West. And the whole thing would be of only academic interest if these negative moods were just a fad that confined itself to a certain age bracket in what I call the Lands of Anxiety.

However, they slop over into countries where cynicism is uncalled for, where perspectives unheard of and undreamed of some 20 years ago are today open to youth.

In fact, it seems that a most subtle kind of propaganda is busy spreading such moods where they exist and making them slop over and affect youth elsewhere. At a time when clearheaded determination is needed to preserve peace and enter to help bring about Socialist illusionment becomes a weapon of the enemy.

Shoddy

NO capitalist in his right senses believes any longer that he can sell the beauties of monopoly capitalism to decisive masses of people.

Seen globally, capitalism and its economic philosophy have ceased to be attractive as a spiritual force, and the hired publicity boys must cover the sorry nakedness of their proposition with talk of "people's capitalism" or "Welfare State"—wilted fig-leaves, to say the least.

But to the capitalists it doesn't matter much if capitalism appears shoddy as long as the other alternative, Socialism, can be made to look like something you don't want to fight for, either.

John Osborne, one of England's "Angry Young Men," has a character in a play he wrote bemoan the fact that in 1957 there is no Loyalist Spain to go to and fight for. There is nothing. No "good cause" anywhere.

That type of young man is not new. In 1937, he would have found that Loyalist Spain and the fight against fascism wasn't so good a cause, either—not pure enough, you know.

And he wouldn't have joined the International Brigade; he would have stayed at home and made smart cracks, quite as he does today.

Ah, these petty bourgeois Parsifals who are so quick to anger because there's blood and dirt in the class struggle, because Communists aren't just one long picture gallery of positive heroes—whom does their anger help?

The cynicism of these youths, their attempt to escape into smart-aleckism—who does this profit? . . . The capitalists, obviously whose rule is maintained by people's inertia.

Worse: we know where anger without direction, or misdirected anger, can lead.

The young men of Germany in the early '30s of this century were angry, too. Many of them turned to fascism. The victims of their anger ended in the gas ovens, and they themselves at Stalingrad.

And why, of all generations of youth, should this one inherit a ready-made paradise?

What entitles the young men and women of some countries to an empty anger over problems that must be faced, anxieties that must be overcome, struggles that must be weathered?

Eagerness

IM glad to say that the other day, here in Moscow, I met young people of a different mind.

They were not disgruntled but enthusiastic, not disillusioned, but eager.

They were engineers and research workers, engaged in extending the frontiers of science and building that brave new world which is the best cause mankind ever had—the world of Socialism.

They didn't shiver in their boots over the threat of the "Big Bang," though they knew the seriousness of the situation. They had confidence that, since wars are made by people, people can prevent wars.

They knew anger, too, but their anger was part of a balanced outlook, and their anger was directed toward a purpose: it was class anger.

They were a handful of the 60,000 graduate engineers the Soviet Union turns out every year.

They were a tiny part of the millions who are the guarantee that life will prevail on earth and that the future which lies before us—all youths and adults, is bright and beautiful.
